SANITARY MEASURES. Mr. Straus offered the following:
Whereas we are fully informed of the alarm caused by the cholera in France, and from sad experience in the past, that it is from sad experience in the past, that it is necessary to put this city in a thorough cleanly condition, and believing it to be necessary at this time for the public good that due precaution should be adopted: therefore be it

6. The said Board of Health to report on these resolutions to the president of either branch of the Council, so that called meetings may be held if necessary.

Dr. Thomas Jeferson Riddell offered as a substitute the following:

Whereas an epidemic of Asiatic cholera is prevailing in certain cities of Europe, and as there is a possibility of this scourge reaching the American shores at no distant day in consequence of frequent communiday in consequence of frequent communi-cations of our country with that continent, it behooves us to be vigilant, and utilize every sanitary measure in our power to protect our city as far as possible against this fearful maiady: therefore be it Resolved by the Common Council of Rich-mond (the Board of Aldermen concurring).

mond (the Board of Addrinen concurring).
That the Board of Health be, and the same is hereby, instructed to inspect, as soon as practicable, the various localities of this city—the alleys especially—and have gas-lime plentifully used on the premises; and also that the gutters in certain sections of the city be flushed out at least three times weekly during the summer months, there-by preventing the accumulation and ob-struction of decomposing vegetable matter, both in gutters and at the entrances of culverts, which is so productive in generating disease and furnishing material for an epidemic to feed upon.

Resolved, secondly. That culverts should be regularly cleaned out, and when so cleaned their contents should be removed.

cleaned their contents should be removed between sunset and sunrise during the summer months.

Mr. Straus said in substance that the ideas were the same, but his resolution bad precedence. Dr. Riddell was a physician. He did not mean to antagonize Dr. Riddell, and he moved that both resolutions be referred to the Board of Health, of which Dr. Riddell was a member, and leave to the Board the acceptance of the one best suited for the purpose intended.

Dr. Riddell favored immediate action on the resolutions, citing the importance of the question at issue.

The resolutions were referred to the Board of Health.

Mr. Biddell offered the following, which was referred to the Committee on Streets:

Whereas the open condition of Shockoe creek, especially between Main and Cary streets, in the central and business part of streets, in the central and business part of our city, is obnoxious and detrimental to the citizens residing in its vicinity, and particularly in hot and dry weather, during the night-time, when fresh air is most desirable, the gaseous exhalations from this sewer are almost intolerable at times, and are exceedingly unfavorable to health and injurious to the business interests of our city: therefore be it

Hesolved by the Common Council of Richmond (the Board of Aldermen concurring), That the City Engineer be, and he is hereby, instructed to examine that portion of Shockoe creek between Main and Cary streets and report to this body at its next meeting the probable cost of creating an arch over it, as above designated.

Mr. King, from the old Fire Committee, presented a report allowing certain privileges for the erection of houses within fire limits, and rejecting certain others.

The Chair decided under the rules that the same was out of order, but intimated that the member, under the call of the Council for resolutions, could offer the same as his own resolution. On motion of Mr. Bowie the rules were suspended, and this was done.

liams, Esq., stock broker, and her cousin, Miss Susie E. Gibson, daughter of Mr. P. H. Gibson, insurance agent, were drowned while bathing near Old Point.

These young ladies—neither was over sixteen—went down to the Point about a week ago, and were stopping with Mrs. Eatoh, and were nuder the care of two lady relatives. Yesterday morning they took their bathing-dresses and went to a portion of the beach known as Kimberley's, a few hundred yards above the Hygela, and had not long been in the water when both were drowned.

The affair produced a profound sensation of sorrow at the Point, and when telegraphed here plunged two large families into inexpressible grief. They were two of the most engaging girls of this city, and were loved by all who knew them. Great efforts were required to find the bodies, but towards evening news reached here that both had been recovered.

Mr. Gibson and Mr. Williams took the evening train for Old Point, and will bring the heafter heat with them. evening train for Old Point, and will bring the bodies back with them,

The Special License-Tax on Them Declare Void by Judge Atkins.

Void by Judge Atkins.

In the Hustings Court yesterday, in the case of Colonel Richard L. Maury, attorney at law, indicated in several cases for dealing in coupons of Virginia Statebonds without having obtained a license so to do, Judge Atkins sustained the motion of defendant and quashed the indictments.

The law requires those who sell these coupons to pay a specific license of $1,000, and in addition thereto 20 percentum on the face value of the coupons.

The cases before the Court were the outgrowth of the proceedings in the Circuit

The cases before the Court were the our growth of the proceedings in the Circuit Court, where, with the consent of the At-torney-General, Coionel Maury paid in coupons the ileanses of a large number of "The real question to be passed upon is whether or not the act under consideration imposes a tax upon coupons? If it does, the act is void as being in conflict with the provisions of the Constitution forbidding the passage of any law which impairs the obligation of contracts. It, on the contra-ry, no burden is thereby put upon the cou-pons, then the statute is valid, and must be enforced,"

A large number of cases were here examined and quoted by the Judge (severator which are referred to below), and he concluded as follows:

With these cases in view, and governed by the rule announced by the Court in the case of Henderson es. Macon supra, "that in whatever language a statute may be framed its purport and its constitutional validity must be determined by the natural and reasonable effect of its provisions," we will now consider the statute upon which the presecution in this case is based.

The coupons which are the subject of taxation in this case (if the amount demanded of the broker by this law is a tax upon them) are not only free from taxation, manded of the broker by this law is a tax upon them) are not only free from taxation, like the imported goods and other things referred to in the decisions I have read, whose non-taxable quality ceases at a certain point, but they are non-taxable as long as they are in existence—their freedom from taxation passes with them from hand to hand and never ceases. Until they are paid or received for taxes by the State for their full amount they are coupons upon which no tax, direct or indirect, can be imposed. In this respect they differ from the other subjects I have named, and in this only. The minute a package of goods is sold, as in the Brown case, or the Cook case, the article loses its exemption from taxation, but not so with ease, or the Cook case, the article loses its exemption from taxation, but not so with the coupon. If a bondholder cuts a coupon from his bond and sells it to a broker or other person, the exemption from taxation follows the coupon and never deserts it while it is outstanding from the public treasury. It is, therefore, free from taxation in the hands of the holder, no matter who he may be—tax-payer or broker.

The act finder consideration in this case matter who he may be—tax-payer or broker.

The act finder consideration in this case provides that "no person shall sell tax-receivable coupons (cut) from bonds of the State of Virginia without a special license, for which privilege he shall pay $1,000 for each office or place of business kept for that purpose."

When the contract between the State and

When the contract between the state and her creditors was entered into no such law as that I have just read was upon our statute-books. The buying and selling of coupons and like evidences of debt was the business of a stock-broker, and any person who engaged in that business was a stock-broker, and liable to pay the hiense-fee of $250. The fee or tay for curving on the broker, and liable to pay the license-fee of $250. The fee or tax for carrying on the business of a stock-broker still remains the same, and under that license the law says my person shall have the right to buy and sell for profit, or to sell on commission or for other compensation, Government stocks or other certificates of public debt. (See Code of 1873, chapter 34, section 43.) The law taxing stock-brokers was in ex-

The law taxing stock-brokers was in existence when the contract between the State and her creditors was made, and therefore enters into and becomes a part of that contract; hence no objection could be raised by the coupon-holder to the tax upon stock-brokers as dealers in coupons.

The tax or fee imposed by this statute is a tax upon dealers in coupons, and does not authorize the sale of anything else.

It is exclusively for the sale of coupons. This law requires all persons who sell tax-receivable coupons to take out a special license, meaning thereby that no matter whether any other license authorizes the sale of these certificates of indebtedness or not, a special license must be obtained to deal in these. deal in these. If then, a license-fee to carry on a par-If, then, a license-fee to carry on a par-ticular business is a tax upon the articles dealt in, the fee in his case would be a tax upon coupons, that being the only article which can be sold under the license.

As indicated in the Brown case, persons who engage in business and deal in taxa-ble articles are liable to pay such license and other taxes as the State may deem troper to exact, though they may be unjust, excessive, and oppressive, because no constitutional prohibition extends to it. But where the article dealt in is free from taxwhere the article dealt in is free from taxation the State cannot impose any tax or fee for the privilege of carrying on the business, which would, in the nature of things, be a tax upon the article sold.

We have seen in the cases of Brown vs.
Maryland, Ward vs. Maryland, and Walton vs. Missouri that a law requiring a license for the privilege of selling a non-taxable article is unconstitutional as imposing a tax upon the article. I say a non-taxable article, because under the circumstances of the cases I have named no tax could be imposed upon the article. In the light of these cases, decided by the highest court in the find, it appears that the license fee or tax of $1,000 required of ail persons who sell tax-receivable coupons is a tax upon the coupons, and inasmuch as no tax can be imposed upon them as decided by the same court in the case of flartman vs. Greenhow, the law is clearly unconstitutional and void.

I deem it unnecessary to do more than merely mention the additional tax of twenty

I deem it unnecessary to do more than merely mention the additional tax of twenty per centum imposed upon the face value of the coupons. It is too plainly unconstitutional to require comment. The bank-tax cases, the passenger cases, Henderson vs. The Mayor, Crandell vs. Nevada, and Cook vs. Penn, are almost directly in point, and are conclusive of the question raised.

I have examined the cases cited by the attorney for the Commonwealth and can find nothing in them in conflict with this decision. The decisions referred to were based upon other points than those upon which this case rests.

It is negligible for that the Commonwealth

It is pretty certain that the Commonwealth will appeal from this decision. weather permits and their inclination suggests.

The company then repaired to the new, or annex, garden of Sänger Halle, where tables were arranged for the accommodation of invited guests and members. An impromptu collation was provided. After the large company had been seated, and all supplied with glasses of foaming beer, the ceremoffies were opened with a "salamander"—a festive feature only fully enjoyed by our German citizens. Then followed relays of beer, interspersed with speeches by Colonel Von Borcke, Colonel A. Anderson, Mr. H. G. Miller, Mr. B. T. For four hours this morning the party will be in Philadelphia. They will have a reception there, then move on to Newark, where they will have receptions and feastings and exursions for several days.

ANOTHER GAME LOST.

Last Game-Twelve lunings Played. The Ironsides closed their engagement The Ironsides closed their engagement with the Virginias yesterday afternoon. The weather was cool and pleasant, and very fine for playing. There were several hundred persons present. "Play" was called five minutes early in order to get through with the game in time for the Ironsides to get off on the 6:40 train. The visitors presented their best battary, Pyle and Oldfield, the Virginias Doyle and Meyers.

and Oldfield, the Virginias Doyle and Morgan.

The out-fielding of both clubs was perfect, save one muffed ball by W. Dugan in centre field. The infielding of the visitors was also good, except Tonner, short-stop. But Hardie made three errors, which, with the two made by Powell and one by Dugan, gave their opponents the victory. The contest was close, and at many points exciting. Up to the last of the ninth inning it appeared that the home team would be shut out, and the visitors only score one. This, however, was changed when in the ninth inning, Glenn to the bat, after two This, however, was changed when in the rinth inning, Glenn to the bat, after two men were out, made a single; followed by Nash for a single and Hardie for a two-bagger, Glenn crossed the "plate" as Oldfield caught the ball, which he let drop. So while Hardie made a number of ugly errors he saved the "boys" from being shut out. The visitors then clevated their score in the twelfth finning to four, while the home team were unable to change theirs. The result was 4 to 1 for the Ironsides. W. The Chief of Police has kindly tendered the use of his force as sanitary inspectors. They will commence their inspection on Thursday, July 10th, examining the lower district first, and then successively through the city. Failure to respond to orders is-sued by the police will be reported to the Police Justice. Respectfully,

President Board of Health.
[The police will no doubt be instructed, oo, to report parties who occupy premises too, to report parties who occupy premises not connected with the city sewerage system. There are many such in thickly-settled neighborhoods. They should be made to connect with the culveris, or if the city ordinances are too loose to effect the object, the City Council must pass new ones. Every "live" city in the land is preparing for a rigorous sanitation, and Richmond ought to do likewise.]

One side of the room is taken up with shelves of all the room is taken up with shelves of all sizes, varying from that of the Times to the duodecumo. Here are stored those wonderful guard-books, scrap-books, and follos, to keep up which used to be one of the pleasures and labors of his life. They have never been disturbed since he took his last look at them. How many romantic stories do they contain; how many tales of crueity, of oppression! What notes of fiery indignation are to be found at their side! What innustrees the side! What innustrees the sides of the sides of the sides of the sides of the sides. pression! What notes of fiery indignation are to be found at their side! What innumerable pages of curious phraseology, figures of speech; what volumes of incidents! What Augean stables to be cleaned out by that vigorous and untiring hand; what pages of jokes, of forgotten scandals, of police reports! A tortuous maze, of which for the present the key is goue. This vast collection was divided into note-books, scrapbooks, and folio cards, and these again were divided into giant folios, folios, and large quartos. He filed Lloyd's Weeldy were divided into giant folios, folios, and large quartos. He filed Lloyd's Weekly News as a chronicle of events. On the lower shelves are volumes of the Times, the Illustrated London News, the Graphic, the Police News, Day's Boings, the New York Police Gazette. He used to devote one day in the week to the entering up of his various newspaper materials, exiting out of the great masses of papers and magazines such paragraphs or pages as he thought would be useful to him.

At 8 o'clock he used to rise. At 9 he breakfasted. At 10 he began his work, which generally lasted until 2, or thereabouts. His work was done in the drawing-room, from the windows of which he could look on to the smooth lawn, some-could look on to the smooth lawn, some-times watching the traffic as it passed the bottom of the garden, or looking on at a bottom of the garden, or looking on at a game of tennis, or amused by the gambols of his tame hares. When the French windows were closed no noise from the street could reach him, though he was not as some authors, for he even tolerated the presence of a friend when at work. When he had fairly broken the ice of a story he worked with great rapidity, and sometimes for many of a friend when at work. Was he had a fairly broken the ice of a story he worked with great rapidity, and sometimes for many hours without a rest. He loved great sheets of drab manuscript paper, great pens, and the blackest of ink. As each sheet was done it was numbered and thrown on to the floor, which after a few hours was carpeted with manuscript. The maid servant gathered up the sheets; they were put in order and sent to his favorite copyist, who returned them written out clean in a neat round hand. Mr. Reade went over them again, slashing here or adding there. The revised sheets were once more copied out, once more revised, and then sent to the printer. Punch once declared that a compositor threw himself off Waterloo bridge in a fit of madness induced by Charles Reade's manuscript—a little joke which he took much to heart. It proved effective, however, and was good for both compositor and copyist. At times he dictated a story, but this happened very seldom. He took no lunch, but dined late, often going to the theatre after dinner. the theatre after dinner. The Experiences of Adam Haser an Members of His Family.

Members of His Family.

A Hawley (Pa.) telegram says: A number of curious mishaps are reported as having happened on the farm of Adam Haser, in the township of Dreher, this county, on three successive days of last week, two of which narrowly escaped terminating fatality. On one of the days two boys, one the twelve-year-old son of Mr. Haser and the other a younger boy named Chapman, were playing in the yard. The latter boy become frightened at a pig that was passing and ran to a well near by and elimbed over the curb, which was very low, to hide. In doing this he fell into the well. His playmate shouled for help, but fearing the boy would drown before ald arrived, he ran to the well and climbed down the side of the wall by means of spaces between ties stones, and seizing the smaller boy by the hair held his head above the water. The cries had been heard by a man walking near, who ran to the well and lowered the bucket. Both boys were drawn safely and uninjured out of the well by clinging to the bucket.

The next day Mr. Haser and his wife were returning home from trading at a neichboring village in a one-horse earriage. On the way the horse took fright at something and ran away. Mr. Haser was thrown from the carriage. Mrs. Haser, who is a very heavy woman, weighing over two hundred pounds, was hurled over the da-bboard. She alighted on the whiffletrees, and succeeded in grasping hold of the dashboard, where she held on for a mile, the horse running at full speed, and his heels grazing her at nearly every step.

To the Public:

We deem it proper to make an appeal to the general public to aid the municipal authorities in their endeavor to keep the city clean. If each housekeeper will see that his or her presuless are kept in a cleanly condition, the work will be accomplished; without their aid but little can be done. It citizens will allow their cellars to remain unventilated and retain refuse matter, their yards to remain unswept, and in many cases with a deposit of ashes and garbage, the accumulation of months pastthee back buildings to remain uncleansed and not disinfected, it is reasonable to suppose that we will have disease in our mudst.

We carnestly appeal to every one to make a thorough examination of their houses and lots; let nothing calculated to breed disease escape their attention. All refuse matter, if placed in the streets or alleys, will be removed by the city carts.

Two efficient purifiers are sun-light and a free circulation of air. Therefore, admin the sun-light into your dwellings during certain hours of the day, and ventilate the whole extablishment from cellar to garret. It is better to breathe the external air, although hotter, than the conflued air of clean and the sun of the day and our citizens should avail themselves of the whole extablishment from cellar to garret. It is better to breathe the external air, although hotter, than the conflued air of clean and the sun of the day and contributed to the confluence of the confluenc
